

NEW WORKPLACE BULLYING LAWS COMMENCED JANUARY 2014

Do you know your obligations? Can you demonstrate that workers and managers are able to recognise and effectively deal with bullying behaviours? Is your business protected?

WHAT IS WORKPLACE BULLYING?

Bullying occurs when:

- a person or a group of people repeatedly behaves unreasonably towards a worker or a group of workers at work ; AND
- the behaviour creates a risk to health and safety.

(Ref. Fair Work Act)

Recent changes to legislation have made it more important than ever for employers and employees to be aware of and take seriously their responsibilities in terms of preventing and dealing with workplace bullying.

Apart from the significant human and social costs associated with bullying, businesses can suffer financial and reputational damage if workplace bullying behaviours are not recognised and appropriately managed. Courts can issue individuals and businesses with substantial penalties if they do not comply with requirements.

Compliance with legislation can be difficult. Non-compliance can be expensive!
